Agenda Setting

Policy Formulation

During policy formulation, government officials, advisors, and interest groups develop possible solutions to the issues on the agenda. This stage often involves debates, research, and drafting of policy proposals.

Policy Adoption

Policy adoption is the decision-making phase where legislative bodies, executives, or administrative agencies formally approve a policy. This may involve passing laws, executive orders, or regulatory rules.

Policy Implementation

Once adopted, policies must be put into action by government agencies and bureaucrats. Implementation involves applying the policy through programs, enforcement, and resource allocation.
