When Does Vikings Training Camp Start?

The question of when is Vikings training camp is answered by looking at the official NFL calendar and the team's announcements. Typically, the Minnesota Vikings training camp begins in late July, shortly after the conclusion of the NFL offseason programs such as Organized Team Activities (OTAs) and mandatory minicamps. For example, recent years have seen training camp start around the third or fourth week of July.

Players are required to report to the training facility on the first official day of camp, where they undergo physical examinations and begin on-field practices. This timing allows the Vikings several weeks of practice and preparation before the preseason games start in August. The exact date may vary slightly year to year based on league-wide scheduling and team-specific decisions, but fans can expect the camp to consistently begin in the latter half of July.

In addition to official start dates, rookies and undrafted players often report earlier for rookie minicamps, which serve as an introduction to the team's playbook and culture. These preliminary camps set the stage for the full training camp that follows.
