Record Holders for Most Major Wins in Men's Golf

The question of who has the most majors in golf often first brings to mind the legendary male golfers who have dominated the sport over the decades. The record for the most major championship victories in men's professional golf is held by a small group of extraordinary players who have demonstrated unparalleled skill, consistency, and mental toughness in the world's toughest tournaments.

Jack Nicklaus: The Golden Bear

Jack Nicklaus is widely recognized as the golfer with the most major championships in men's golf history. Nicknamed "The Golden Bear," he amassed a total of 18 major titles during his illustrious career. His victories spanned over two decades, from his first major win at the 1962 U.S. Open to his last at the 1986 Masters Tournament. Nicklaus's record stands as a benchmark for excellence and has challenged subsequent generations of golfers.

Other Notable Men's Major Winners

While Jack Nicklaus holds the record, several other male golfers have made significant impacts with multiple major wins. Most notably, Tiger Woods follows closely with 15 major championships, a record that reflects his dominance in the late 1990s and 2000s. Additionally, Walter Hagen and Ben Hogan each won 9 majors, contributing to the rich history of the sport.

- Jack Nicklaus - 18 major titles
- Tiger Woods - 15 major titles
- Walter Hagen - 11 major titles
- Bobby Jones - 7 major titles (including amateur majors)
- Ben Hogan - 9 major titles

Leading Female Golfers with the Most Major Titles

The women's professional golf circuit also boasts remarkable champions who have accumulated multiple major championships, setting records in their own right. The number of recognized majors in women's golf has varied over time, but the greatest female golfers have established themselves through consistent success at the highest level.

Katherine Graham and Patty Berg

Patty Berg is considered one of the most successful female golfers in terms of major victories, with 15 major championships to her name. Her career spanned the 1930s to the 1950s, during which she helped elevate women's golf to new heights. Another significant figure is Louise Suggs, with 11 majors, while Mickey Wright, with 13 major titles, is often celebrated for her remarkable skill and technique.

Annika Sörenstam and Modern Champions

In the modern era, Annika Sörenstam stands out as one of the most accomplished female golfers, winning 10 major championships during her career. Her dominance in the late 1990s and early 2000s helped popularize women's golf globally. Other contemporary players like Inbee Park and Lorena Ochoa have also made significant impacts with multiple major victories.

- Patty Berg - 15 major titles
- Mickey Wright - 13 major titles
- Louise Suggs - 11 major titles

- Annika Sörenstam - 10 major titles
- Inbee Park - 7 major titles
